

Sirs;The service provided by XM is not available from commercial radio. That is the reason for their success. Please consider that the public owns the airways for their exclusive benefit. Only open and complete competition will improve the services offered by both satellite and broadcast stations for the public good.

The mega sized corporations such as Clear Channel have already been given far too much government support. Those companies firmly believe that they should exist without any competition at all. The FCC has given them an unfair advantage over all.

Sincerely,
Noel L. Briley
